Branding Price list May 2004

Branding/Handling Code

The explanation of the above codes can be found on the first page of this price-list document. When you look in the price-list under the branding/handling column will see the print code first. If an item is not easy to unpack or re-pack or when there is extra handling or special packing involved, the print code will be followed by a '/' and then the packing/handling code: example - P1,L/U,R - this is an item that can be pad printed or laser engraved and is not easy to unpack or re-pack. The branding code for an item may vary but the packing/handling code for the item is always the same.

For some of the techniques we have not only the letter code, but also a number. The number explains the difficulty to print. P1 for instance is used for plastic items that are easy to print, while P3 is used for metal items, which need extra hardener, scratch easily and need careful handling.

All prices are per position and per colour. Prices for Macbryan (Pty) Ltd. articles only.

Supply of films or original artwork for photographic reproduction:

Films for pad printing, wrong reading positive, maximum raster 40 (102 lpi)

Films for silk-screen, right reading positive, raster on request.

For laser engraving only digital files should be supplied.

Please supply original artwork for photographic reproduction as large as possible, and of good quality, in black and white on max. A4.

When supplying files intended for multi-colour precision printing or full colour work, please contact the printing department regarding the required technical details. The correct supply of films or files has a major impact on delivery time! Fixed studio costs are calculated on the basis of a maximum of half an hour's work. We will charge for any extra time by the quarter of an hour.

Brief a of printing techniques:

Pad printing is a printing technique suitable for almost all backgrounds and shapes. The design is first applied to a metal printing plate by means of a photographic process. The design is then transferred onto the article by a pad (a rubber intermediary). A variety of shapes can be printed by means of variously shaped pads. For most articles it is possible to print in one or more colours. Most of the articles shown in the catalogue which are made from synthetic materials were printed using the pad printing method. The maximum print format is 3.5 x 7 cm.

Silk-screen printing is a technique where the design is applied to the gauze of a screen which has a light-sensitive upper layer. A film of the design, with some areas which allow light to pass through and others which do not, is placed on the gauze, which is then illuminated with ultra-violet light. The unlit areas are rinsed off the gauze so that the ink can pass through. The article to be printed is placed immediately under the gauze, the printing ink is pressed through the gauze, and so the print is transferred to the article. Only flat surfaces can be printed using the silk-screen technique. For most articles it is possible to print in one or in multiple colours. In particular, textiles and nylon products such as umbrellas and bags are printed using silk-screen. The maximum print format is 25 x 35 cm.

Transfer printing is when a logo is silk-screen printed on a so-called transfer. The transfer is cut into a size of the logo and then via heat press applied to the promotional article. It is mostly used for textile and umbrellas. Some of our articles that can be screen printed in one colour, have to be printed via transfers when a multi colour logo is required. It is also used when fine details have to be printed that can not be printed by regular silk-screen printing.

Embroidery is a technique where the logo is sewed on the article. Embroidery is used for caps, bags, textiles etc. The pricing of embroidery is not driven by the number of colors, but the number of stitches and the size of the logo. The color will be defined by the color of the thread. The maximum number of colors of the threads is 15. An Embroidery card needs to be made for reproducing. A Full surface or logo's with gold and silver cord are more expensive to produce.

Laser engraving is a method in which the design is burned into metal. The laser beam is controlled by a computer, which means that the design can be reproduced in fine detail. Laser engraving is not possible in colour. The colour is determined by the background metal. The maximum engraving format is 3.5 x 6 cm. Prices shown in the price list are based on a maximum printed surface of 2 cm<sup>2</sup>. A surcharge of 50% applies for larger surfaces.

Embossing, through a stamp the design is being pressed into the product. Embossing can only be used on most real leather materials. Embossing can not be done in colour. The maximum print size for Embossing is 6x3 cm

Thermo print is very much like embossing, as it also used on leather articles. The difference is that the logo is pressed into the product with a hot press. Colour can also be applied (no Pantone but some given colours like Silver, Gold, Red, White, Yellow or Black).

Photocopy is a process where the logo is copied on a piece of paper and cut to the size that it fits in the promotional product. The product has a so-called window that can be taken off in order to apply the photocopy. After, the window is closed and the product is ready.

Doming is a combination of a printout from a logo on a sticker and a 2 component epoxy resin that is applied to the printout, which gives a nice transparent bubble. The resin is not only crystal-clear but also protects the image below and gives an extra dimension to it. The sticker can be multi-colour. The resin highlights the logo. The doming sticker will be pasted on the article.
